The New Building.

The New Building For Its Accommodation Projected at Harrisharg.

The founders of the perfected commonwealth of the future will probably take a leaf from the lessons of the past and provide public buildings of sufficient amplitude for all possible contingencies in advance of the promulgation of their constitution. Then when the need for them arises the structures will be ready without the necessity of appealing to the member from Wayback. If Pennsylvania could have thus provided a state library building for herself a century or two ago, her public records would be in better shape than they are at present. As bray bulling for herself a century or two ago, her public records would be in better shape than they are at present. As it is, they have overrun the accommoda-tions provided for them, and it has been necessary to store some of them in all sorts of out of the way places, in attics and cel-lars where there are worked. lars, where they are rapidly being de-various sections gave their opinions on the output of feeding straw through The Rural New Yorker. An Illinois farmer eald that now all of the out straw and most of the wheat straw is carefully stacked. The long swing stacker in use enables three men to put up an immense ls not in a yard or small pasture, many farmers inclose it with a temporary fence and yard cutile, horses and about it all winter. The horses and catthe eat part of it and trample the rest down, converting the whole into a mass of coarse manure, which is afterward hauled out and spread on pastures or corn ground. While yarded about a stack of straw like this the cattle and horses are given one feed a day of corn fodder with the ears left on, and the pigs yarded with them see that none is wasted.

stock and feed the straw to the animals in large feed racks placed just outside the fence. After the stock have picked Brickiul over, the coarser stuff remaining is thrown out to be trampled down and a new supply takes its place. With and a new supply takes its place. With one feed of shock corn a day, both horses and cattle winter mirely on straw. Sheep also do well on good, bright straw with one feed of mixed oats and shelled corn a day. It wouldn't pay here to chop and steam the straw, and the stock eat very hitle more of it when dampened and unxed with ground feed of any hind. A farmer writing from New York said: Stock will eat more straw and there will be less waste when it is chopped and moistened with water and sprinkled with meal. Whether this would be profitable to the farmer would depend upon his supply of other feed and the amount of labor at his command. varded with them see that none is wasted.

Some farmers put a fence around the arock and feed the straw to the animals with food and warm clothing. As Stone proved willing to work and there was a good deal of labor to be performed about the place, Mr. Rigney permitted hun to remain, and since then he has made the Rigney home his headquarters.
During his leisure hours Stone spent his time instructing a young son of the Rigneys in the trade of boat building. In a lot adjoining the house he estab-lished a miniature shippard, with cra-dle, blocks and ways, and there he built a full size steam launch, which lacks nothing but an engine to make it com plete. The tale the stranger told was about as follows: Five years ago he was s schoolboy in England and had a penchant for reading tales of adventure. His reading made him so long for travel that he ran away and went to sea. When he came home, his father took him to Livermool and bound him over to a sea captain for a voyage to and from Australia He was signed for two A Virginia correspondent wrote on the subject as follows: "Straw should be been invisited the boy's dreams had been well but up in a rick, running east and dispelled, and he had determined to dewell put up in a rick, running east and sert. When the vessel reached San west, in pens just high enough so that Francisco on the homeward voyage, he accordingly got ashore and staid there.

Flo was pountless, hence his application for chality at the home of the Rigneys. During the voyage from England to Australia the sailer's father flied, leaving him a fortane of more than £83, 000. But the news to this effect came only very recently.

Young Stone wrote from Oakland to his father soveral times, but received no response so when Walter Seawell, an Oakland contractor, left for a visit to England a few months ago, he was commissioned by the young man to hunt up his father and see why he failed to espond to the communications addressed to him. Mr. Seawell found that the elder Stone was dead and notified the son of this fact and of the further fact The Farm Journal has the following to that he was no longer poor. The news has since been confirmed by the British say concerning rations especially adapt- consul of San Francisco, who advanced young Stone the necessary coin to enable him to return to his English home. -- San Francisco Examiner.

It begins to look as if the only mistake made so far consisted in not planning more commodious buildings at the outset. Already annexes to the main structures are being talked of, and it is apparent that if they are not erected or additional space for exhibits supplied in some other way a great many applications will have to be dealed.

It teemed in the becoming-teet but the teether with the common teether way a great many applications will have to be dealed. It seemed in the beginning that the buildings had been planned on a sufficiently generous scale. The Manufactures building is 450 feet iong and 250 feet in width, the Agricultural building 400 by 200, the Machinery building 350 by 175, and the Fine Arts building 135 by 65. The COLORS OF THE FART The spectacle presented at this interchange of royal contrests was very touch ing and theatrical. Not often is the opportunity given for sovereigns, whom the world mistakenly suppose to be secretly jealons of each other's precognities and dignities to show to all a ankind how really and early they love each other how they stand shoulder to shoulder in the interests of peace harmony and good will. It was a grand occasion.

giri was until about a week age, em ployed as a nurse girl by M1: Thomp son, at 600 West Market street She vas discharged at that time Last Sunkay, while Rev and Mis Thompson were away from home, the firsan girl returned to the house and told the cervant that she had re turned for some clother she had neg lected to take with her. She was al lowed to go to the room and remained there for some time. When she left she carried a bundle of things with her, which the servant girl supposed were her clothes, but when Mr and Mrs Thompson returned home they discovered that the girl had taken a number of attacles belonging to Mis

and swore out an affidavit charging

SIEALING A DIAMOND pracelet a diamond breast pin, two scarfs a satin dress pair of sealskin gloves and a cloth dress. The entire lot was ratued at $90. Squire Gra-bam issued a warrant, which wis placed in the hands of Constable from Comer, who located the girl at the home of lames Edwards, about three mles west of the city, on the Spon cerville road He was accompanied by Policeman Patton The girl was rrested and confessed the theft the produced all the good, except the bracelet and breast pin. The bracelet she had left with the night lerk at the Atlantic Hotel, where she occupied a room Monday night in payment for her lodging. The payment for her lodging reast pin she denied having any knowledge of and his not yet been She remained in the county Jail over night and at 9 10 oclock his moining was arraigned before Source Graham, who read the affida out to her. She pleaded guilty to the theft of every thing except the breast

Squire Giaham bound her over to the grand jury in the sum of $500
